

Focus on South East Asia

Days 18 - 20

Testimonies from Malaysia and Indonesia

Rob (not his real name) became involved in a cult called the “Sky Kingdom” in Northern Malaysia. The group proclaimed a type of unity between all religions. From his youth Rob had been heavily involved in the occult and had even been trained in black and white magic (witchcraft), however he was not satisfied. In February 2005, a Christian began to witness to Rob, who specifically wanted to know the truth. That summer the cult was outlawed by the Malaysian government, and religious police searched for cult members. The group’s members, including Rob, all fled. Eventually tracked by the police dogs, Rob knew that his life was in danger. He tried to use magic to escape, but he was not successful. Finally Rob called on Jesus Christ: “Isa (a Muslim term for Jesus) if you are God, deliver me now!” Within moments he felt he was being lifted and thrown clear from the search team, and afterwards a villager on a motorcycle took him far away. From that moment on, Rob began to believe that Isa was Lord, and he wanted to learn more about him. In April 2006, Rob was baptized in water. Later many of his friends also believed in Jesus.

The Petronas Towers in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

An Indonesian couple from a Muslim background invited some Christians to help them with their business, and the Christians began to share their beliefs. The husband and wife came to faith and even began to have Christian gatherings in their home. There was soon strong opposition from the village leader, who forbade the couple to see the Christians. The entire Muslim village soon joined the in the opposition and persecution. The couple’s rice business suffered. No one wanted to buy rice from them, and their faith was put to test. For one month their income was greatly reduced, but the wife’s faith was strong and she believed that God was going to help them. The next month the wife sold rice as never before; the couple made more profit than in many previous months! They experienced God’s faithfulness!

